The luggage taken by the new consul general and his wife was considerably larger than that which they brought with them when they arrived in Washington, due to presents received and to less than thirty-six extra pieces of luggage of all sizes, over that which originally accompanied the party.

A fine Chinese cat, in a big basket, attracted much attention. The animal was a present to the new consul and seemed pleased at the prospect of being able to purr in New York the same as abie to purr in New York the same as Pleased With Washington.

Both Consul General Tseng and Mme. pleased with Washington and their visit. Many new friends were made and Mme. Tseng was especially gratified at the social attentions paid to her.
